CONNECT to your niche

At Rochester College, getting students involved is a top priority.

There are many organizations and activities designed to do this, and each one is waiting for new students to come in and leave their mark. We have student-run publications (including a monthly newspaper, annual yearbook, and creative writing compilations), student-directed productions (in both music and theatre), and student-led mission and spiritual endeavors (such as IMAGE, The Offering, and mission teams that cross the globe at every break in the year). Faculty and staff invite students into their homes with Dinner at Six, providing the opportunity to foster relationships outside of the classroom, and every semester concludes with the popular Midnight Breakfast. If you're not the type to be on one of our intercollegiate athletic teams but you still like to get out and play, intramurals were made for you. Homecoming and Celebration are annual activities that unite the campus and even bring alumni back to relive old college memories. Whoever you are, and wherever you're coming from, Rochester College has something for you—something that will take your college experience to a level you don't even anticipate. With all of these different opportunities for involvement, every student can find his or her niche somewhere.
